Fluctuation of rare particles as a measure for chemical equilibration

S. Jeon V. Koch K. Redlich X. Wang

Nucelar Science Division, Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, USA

[b] Nucelar Science Division, Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, USA

[c] Institute of Theoretical Physics, Univ. of Wroclaw, Poland

[d] Nucelar Science Division, Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, USA

Presented by: Sangyong Jeon

Abstract

When the number of produced particles are small and under a conservation law, the event-by-event fluctuation of its multiplicity is very different from what one would expect from the grand-canonical ensemble. The behavior of the fluctuation and the related first factorial moment provide good probes for the degree of chemical equilibration and the initial population of the rare particles.

Preprint submitted to Elsevier Preprint 20 December 2000